

I am strongly opposed to the use of cellular telephones aboard airborne aircraft. In such close quarters, the use of cell phones will greatly intrude upon those not using cell phones. Non-cell phone users will have no options to avoid the intrusive noise of these conversations and will be forced to listen to the personal/business conversations of strangers with again, no recourse, to remove themselves from the intrusion. I foresee increased levels of aggravation which may lead to increased levels of passengers involved in verbal and possibly physical confrontations, making flying more uncomfortable and potentially unsafe.
